What to think about when selling your business...

Some of the issues you should consider before selling are:

- What are you selling, e.g. are the assets to be sold separately? is the business a going concern? is the goodwill for sale? is there proper title for each asset?
- What information will be provided to the potential buyer, e.g. accounting records; the accuracy of statements made to entice the buyer.
- Whether the buyer can continue to run the business successfully during any transition period following purchase, e.g. training the purchaser and introducing them to established customers.
- Whether the financial records of the business are up to scratch and what should be done to get them into shape, e.g. detailed information about business debts, loans, whether the debt will be assumed by the buyer etc.
- Is the business is leased premises? If it is will the landlord agree to transfer the lease?
- Tax implications, e.g. capital gains tax, value of stock, roll over relief etc.
- The business's market and the nature of competition.

All sound confusing? This is where the Oz Business Service Centre can help you!
